War Garden Bulletin

The Home Storage of Vegetables for Winter Use

As a war-time measure to form of food conservation is more important than the home storage of vegetables for winter use. The war garden should not put off the storing of its produce until the last minute. The vegetables to be stored are: potatoes, beets, carrots, parsnips, onions, cabbages, cauliflower, Brussels sprouts, winter squash, turnips and beans.

Good results depend largely upon ventilation of the vegetable storage. The temperature should be kept at about 45 degrees Fahrenheit. The humidity should be maintained at about 80 per cent. For some vegetables the pantry shelf or the refrigerator is the best place of storage. For others outdoor storage is preferable. A simple method is to provide storage facilities. In some places several neighboring families form communities to provide storage facilities. In this way complete provision is made for handling winter supplies with little trouble and expense to the individual household. Several families might combine to form a community storage. ## Window Food Displays

Some Splendid Experiments Have Recently Been Arranged by Merchants

Window displays to assist the cause of food conservation are being arranged by merchants in the big cities. The most striking examples are being given at the Dominion Stores, Ltd., in London, England. The store has arranged a display of foodstuffs in its window, which is being used to illustrate the importance of food conservation.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited, Dear Sir: We have had a letter from you on my face for a long time and a number of remedies used with no result. I have been told of MINARD'S LINIMENT, and after using several bottles I find it a complete cure, and it is healed all and disappeared. All yours, J. HENDERSON, Guelph Station, Kings Co., N. B., Sept. 17, 1914.

Britain was Near to Irretrievable Disaster

U-Boat one of the Greatest Perils Against Which the Allies Have to Fight

The great body of the British nation failed to realize how near Britain came to irretrievable disaster because of the German U-boats, said Frederick George Kellaway, secretary to the minister of munitions, speaking in an English Midlands town last week.

In discussing the submarine peril, Mr. Kellaway said: "The U-boat is still one of the greatest perils against which the allies have to fight. Those who suppose that the war is over, and that these risks are living in a fool's paradise. But, the danger is not over. The U-boats are still a very real threat to the allies."

"Recent returns show the losses of merchant ships from the U-boats. There have been losses recently when the Germans have been torpedoed, and the danger is not over. The U-boats are still a very real threat to the allies."

The Meaning of Wilson's Meaning

The Past and the Present are in a Deadly Grapple

We hope General Ludendorff and his master, we hope every German

Intelligent enough, to read the president's meaning will read and soberly consider the Mount Vernon address. It is the handwriting on the wall for all of them. "There can be no compromise," the president says. "The war must be fought to the end."

"The destruction of every single position of the enemy must be the aim of the war," the president says. "The war must be fought to the end."

That means Germany and Germany alone. The German people will not in time put away their delusions and set their faces to the future. They will not accept the peace that is offered them.

Where Surplus Wheat Is

Plenty of Wheat to Go Round if Ships Were Available

There is no lack of wheat in the world. The German submarines will not be able to take the wheat out of the world. The wheat is there, and it is only necessary to take it out of the world.

Convoys System Has Saved Lives

Vessels Lost While Homeward Bound Since Jan. 1, 1918.

Speaking in the British house of commons, Sir Leo Meade, parliamentary secretary to the minister of shipping, said that the percentage of ships lost while homeward bound to the United Kingdom since January 1, 1918, was rather more than one per cent. The losses of ships and crews were rather less than 14 per cent.

The result of the convoys system, Sir Leo said, continued to improve. Since January, 1917, the percentage of ships lost while homeward bound to the United Kingdom was rather more than one per cent.

The Keystone Province

From a Speech by Lord Dufferin Delivered in Windsor, Sept. 29, 1914

From its geographical position, and its peculiar characteristics, Manitoba may be regarded as the keystone of the arch of the provinces which spans the continent from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It is here that Canada, emerging from the wilderness, has found its way to the world.

The German Scheme in Africa

Strategic Positions for Exercising World Power

Jan Christian Smuts, commander-in-chief of the British forces in East Africa, has an important article in the World Review, in which he discusses the menace of German colonial ambition. As a matter of fact, he declares:

"German colonial ambitions are really not colonial, but are entirely dominated by far-reaching conceptions of world power. The German colonial policy is a policy of world power. The German colonial policy is a policy of world power. The German colonial policy is a policy of world power."

Modern Farming

In the Time of Nero It Took Four and a Half Days' Labor to Grow Bushel of Wheat

The Greeks and Romans were long on art short on bread. A modern farmer with the practice of modern scientific knowledge and use of modern machines can grow a bushel of wheat in ten hours a day, six days a week for all the weeks of his three score and ten years. In the time of Nero it took four and a half days' labor to grow a bushel of wheat; when the mill and the reaper were invented it took three hours; in the reign of King George V it took one hour. No longer is the farmer a drudge. Today he is a man who mixes brains with his hands. He grows and uses science in gathering in his abundant harvest. His work is becoming so pleasant and profitable that men of the cities are seeking homes and employment on the land.

To have the children sound and healthy is the fate of a mother. They cannot be healthy if troubled with worms. Use Mother Gray's Worm Exterminator.

W. M. SAUNDERS'S HOBBY

W. M. Saunders, a prominent farmer living near Oyen, displayed at the 1917 fair a collection of 23 varieties of grains and grasses, mounted on an oblong panel. This exhibit was awarded the first prize of $25, which was donated by the real estate dealers, Swenson & Lees. This year Mr. Saunders exhibited a semi-oval mount with 30 different grasses and grains. The real estate men offered a similar prize at the last fair and the same farmer carried it away. The two collections can be seen at the Swenson & Lees office on Main Street East.

SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC

Those who did not go to the Alsask fair or did not stay at home were at the Sunday school picnic, which was the chief attraction at the W. T. A. Walker lake on last Wednesday afternoon.

Several speeches which were looked for the occasion were delivered, not because of the late postal strike, but because the pleasure seekers were so absorbed with the various amusements and the boat that it was too late when they assembled again.

The children certainly enjoyed themselves endeavoring to win the prizes, which were popular, namely, 15c, 10c and lastly the nickel, which has almost lost its value since the war began. Fresh fruits and other refreshment were obtainable on the grounds and the sisters and mothers brought well filled baskets, so that all displayed great pleasure when they sat by the water's edge to partake of an outdoor lunch.

PEG O' MY HEART

The immortal comedy of youth, "Peg o' My Heart," which has sent a gale of laughter around the world, was staged for the first time in the Oyen Theatre on Thursday, August 15. Nearly every seat in the hall was occupied and there is room for 300 persons. Arthur Edwards, who is conducting this Canadian tour for the United Producing Company, said to The Oyen News representative that the local theatre was one of the roughest staged theatres that it company has ever played in, and that it was a lot for P. H. Todd, who through his own organization and the co-operation of the townspeople made this opera house a reality.

Belva Morrell was "Peg" and Edward K. De Tine co-starred. The other members of the cast gave good support. The interlude between the second and last act was by Mr. De Tine, who entertained the audience with his violin.

The evening previous the players were at the Hanna fair and the day following the performance here they presented "Peg o' My Heart" at Stettler.

A man in a neighboring town went in the meat market to buy forty cents' worth of beefsteak. The butcher weighed and tied up the steak and laid the package on the counter. The customer gave him a half dollar and the butcher tossed him a dime in change. The dime landed on the counter, but the parcel disappeared. A strict search was made and the meat was finally found under the dime.

A well known and popular Oyen financier has figured it that if a man of normal health will commence at the age of seventeen years to plant three bones each day he will at the end of thirty-two years (health and weather permitting) have $36,000. After he had done all this figuring he knut his brow and wondered how much of that 36,000 rounds of pleasure he had already enjoyed. Evidently he did not add the accrued interest.
